Harry Potter's wand was 11" long, made of holly, and possessed a phoenix feather core. This was described by Garrick Ollivander to be an unusual combination of wand core and wood. The feather was donated by Fawkes, Albus Dumbledore's phoenix. It was revealed by Garrick Ollivander that Tom Riddle's wand core also came from Fawkes, making the two wands "brothers". Harry's wand was described as ...

A deluminator is a device invented by Albus Dumbledore that resembles a cigarette lighter. It is used to remove or absorb (as well as return) the light from any light source to provide cover to the user. In Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone, Dumbledore uses the deluminator (then referred to as the Put-Outer) to darken Privet Drive, where the Dursley family's house is located.

The steam wand actually heated the milk faster than the old Mr Coffee machines, and the plastic frother worked surprisingly well, giving a good foamy head to the milk. Just like on all the Mr Coffee machines, the steam wand is too short and too close to the maker, but if you use a smaller pitcher and hold it at an angle, it will work.

"Your wand, Mr Malfoy," she demanded calmly, stretching out her hand. He snorted. "Sod off," he muttered coldly, but he felt something at his side move, and watched with furious eyes as his wand left his pocket and landed in her palm. "You will not be permitted to attend classes with the rest of the students," she told him crisply.
