In Super Mario Bros. 2, Snifits (shown here to be affiliated with the 8 bits) are less common than their Shyguy relatives and come in different colors. There is only one red Snifit, found in World 3-3; this trait is changed in many later appearances, where most Snifits are red. The red Snifit acts similar to a red Shyguy, walking off ledges it comes to but occasionally firing.

Once you have that sorted, you have to be level 12 and have spent 12 in-game hours in the game (which can be done by just pressing the "wait" key and letting 12 hours go by in 12 seconds). You're given the quest to visit the Frontier, and that's about all I've seen thus far, so I can't really spoil anything.

The game manuals for Metroid in Japan used pronouns like "it" mainly because the Japanese language only has gender-neutral pronouns like aitsu. The American manuals flat-out referred to Samus as a "he", but it is unknown if this was an attempt to keep Samus' gender a secret or simply a mistranslation.
