So, as most people in the known literary and popular culture universe know, Stephen King published an original eStory, Mile 81, today. Even though there are no deer in the story, I imagined the monster driving by these two ghostly Bambinos and licking its chops (so the photo fits the eerie feeling and atmosphere - OK, this may be stretching things, but at least these deer are safe).

Stephen King has always been willing to experiment with new ways to present his work to readers, be it serial novels, comics, illustrated prose-pieces or as in this case for a specific e-reader. This is the second story initially released as a Kindle-only piece, however whereas the subject matter of the first story UR was the Kindle itself, Mile 81 has nothing to do with the device.
